By Mr. Warre:—Report of Committee on Teachers, Examiners and Salaries. All teachers of last year are caudidates for re-election with the exception of Misses Valentine, Mills, Barrand Youngman. An increase of salary is recommended in some cases as an expression of appreciation of services rendered during last year, and a stimulus to still greater effectiveness. A slight increase is also recommen-ded in a lew cases where salary is less than paid to other teachers in same grades. In yet other cases, in accordance with the custom of increasing the salary of new teachers $50 after the first year, and $50 at the end of the

To the Honorable Board of Education, Springfield Your Committee on Teachers, Examiners and Salaries would present the following report:

All the teachers in the employ of the board last year are candidates for re-election this year except Misses Valentine, Mills, Barr and Youngman, who decline re-election.

Youngman, who decline re-election.

In view of the stringency of the times, we have not thought it wise to recommend any general increase in salaries. Still we are convinced that in a few cases, in view of long or specially successful service, or both, a slight increase should be made, both as as an expression of our appreciation of service already rendered and as furnishing to all a healthful stimulus to still greater effectivence in the rendered and as furnishing to all a healthful selimulus to still greater effectiveness in the tuture, by thus giving the assurance that merit shall in due time receive some substan-tial recognition. A slight increase is also recommended in a few other cases where the present salary is less than that paid to other tancher in the same grade or less than that teachers in the same grade, or less than that paid to others who have taught for a corresponding term of years. In other cases where an increase is recommended it is in accord-ance with the established custom of the board fity more at the end of the first year, and fity more at the end of the second.

The High School demands a few words of passing notice. It certainly ought to be the strongest and most effective portion of our system of public instruction. It should furnish an incentive to scholars in the lowest grades, prompting them to do their very best. Its discipline should be, in a marked degree, such as is essential to every well or-dered school. There should be no lack of harmony of aim and effort on the part of all who are directly responsible for its manage-ment. No teacher should be crippled by be-ing compelled to teach a class of such numbers that two teachers are needed to do the

Your committee does not attempt to say Your committee does not attempt to say where all the responsibility lies for any defects which may exist. They would not, by word or deed, cast any reflection upon the motives, or character of any one. But they are satisfied that the highest efficiency can be secured only by a radical change in the teaching force. The changes which are recommended will appear farther on in this report.

For the reasons which have been suggested, your committee unanimously recommended.

The time and place for holding the Sensdition are not reassuring. He lies in a stupo most of the time and is only aroused with difficulty to the point of recognizing those about him. His left side is paralysed and senseless, but he has partially recovered the use of his right side. An electric battery was brought into use in his case yesterday with some success, but on the whole the improvement in his condition since his prostration Saturday night is not pronounced, and slight hopes are given for his recovery. This is a sad reflection for the Judge's friends throughout the State. The prominent place in the tri-weekly city market borne by our florists is notable, both for the ex ent and excellence of the exhibition. It will compare favorably, most of the time, with the Cincinnati flower market.

THE TRICKS OF MEDIUMS. Keller Tells How Easily Great Mon Have

"Well I'll tell you how I got into the business," said Mr. Keller, the magician beginning one of his lively chats yesterday. "A good many years ago I traveled with the Davenport brothers. Their father was an old man then, and he used to tell me over and over that his sons were true mediums of spiritual power, and that they were called to that mission by divine will. Well, he being an old man and I a boy, of course I believed him, especially when I saw their inexplicable tricks. I looked on the brothers with awe, and traveled with them for eight years as an assistant. Finally, filled with a pious desire to serve the spirits a little myself, I got hold of a rope alone. I tied my hands the best I could imitate the brothers, to sort of coax the spirits, but they soted as if they didn't care for my services, and whether I wanted myself tied or untied, I had to do it myself. I studied knots awhile and practiced them, and finally I got one of the other assistants to tie me. The result gratified me, for I found I could just manage to get out. I kept on trying and found I could get out of the rope let him to it as he would. Skep-ticism had already set in, and I soon found myself working at the other tricks of the brothers and could do many of them. About this time Fay, who was the old manager of the brothers, found out that I had discovered their secrets, and we at once started up a company of two struck off on our own account. traveled all over the world, and have seen all the tricks going. You hear great stories about the tricks of Eastgreat stories about the tricks of Eastern jugglers, and a great many of them are pure yarns. I saw a newspaper article just the other day that was full of them, such as a man throwing a ribbon up in the air, climbing up out of sight, falling down in pieces, and putting himself together, and all that. It isn't so. The European magicians are far superior to the Orientals.

I am bent on exposing, without hurting the business of any reputable juggler. To begin with, I think that Spiritualism puts more people in the insane asyl m than anything else except liquor. But we can excuse the majority of the Spiritualists when great men allow themselves to be easily fooled. For instance, I was the assistant at a private scance which the Davenport brothers gave in London to a number of centlemen among whom were Dion of gentlemen, among whom were Dior Boucleault, Charles Reade, Algernor Borthwick, Lord Burry, Capt. Ingle-field, and others. The brothers were both tied in their cabinet. Lord Burry stepped up and leaned over one of them to examine the knot, when the other quickly siapped him on the back. These great men were struck with awe Now, let me tell you, this rope trick depends upon mere physical dexterity, and the slap was made like a flash and pretty hard; but here is the descrip-tion Dion Boueleault wrote of it: 'A small white, delicate female hand suddenly appeared above one of the doors of the cabinet. It quivered for several seconds, and then, slowly descending, tapped Lord Burry gently on the

'Then I remembered having met both men at Cape Town, in South Africa, four years before. Geary had died three years before. Geary and I had joked about Spiritualism at the St. George Hotel in that town, thousands of miles away. Well, I had to confess I didn't know how the thing was done, and paid my forfeit. But the mystery is now clear. I learned it several years afterward. At the hall in Cape Town, Africa, where I performed, there was a Aftica, where I performed, there was a janitor named Hutchinson, a great Spiritualist. Englington had been there just after I left, and, of course, Hutchinson told him all about me. That's how he got his information, for the spiritual letter and mediums are always preparing the was the ways and the ways in this way. ways preparing themselves in this way. As to how he wrote the communication on the slate I found that out, too, and have done it before the Siebert Com-mission, which is investigating Spiritu-alism, and will soon report. They have had Slade and Lord and a great many alleged mediums before them.

Nearly all the Spiritualists are honest

A tramp sneaked up to the window of Colonel Merrill's kitchen, and, taking off his remnant of a bat, said to Matilda Snowball, who is blacker than the ace of spades: "Fair lady, can't you give a poor but respectable man something to stay his stomach? Have something to stay his stomach? Have you no pie, for instance?" Matilda had both compassion and pie, and, cutting the latter in halves, gave one of them to the polite visitor, remarking that he was a gentleman, even if he was white. "Thanks," he responded, may you retain your present beauty for a thousand years." "Dat's twice too much," said Matilda, blushing. "Well, if its twice too much fair lady, give me the other half of the pie to make us even." He got it.—Texas Siftings.

Judge Black's Memory.

Memory can not be depended on to observe any fixed law of development. It is quite as likely to take one channel as another. Some people who display astounding memories in one special direction, and on one particular line of thought or occupation, may be strange-ly weak in others. Take, for instance, says the New York Graphic, the late says the New York Graphic, the late Judge Black, of Pennsylvania. He lived to be over 60, and wore his age with the ease of a well-preserved athlete. Shortly before he died he made a visit to Europe. What do you think he went to see? There were only three things and they were all in England. An English horse-race, an English court of assize, and the field of Runnymede, where the magnia charts was an English norse-race, an English court of assize, and the field of Runnymede, where the magna charta was wring from King John. Barring the passion for horseflesh which always dominated the big old judge, the other points of interests to him in England bear some relation to the fact that probably no citizen this country ever produced has a more profound and intricate knowledge of the struggles passed through by the Anglo-Savon race before constitutional government was reached. Not considering now his purely professional attainments as a lawyer, or his varied accomplishments in many fields of polite literature, the judge was a cyclopædia of constitutional history. He never forgot what he read, and when once fairly aroused he would electrify with the depth and brilliancy of his talk.

One night at the Ebbit house in Washington in February, 1877, during the head days of the schement.

Washington in February, 1877, during the hot days of the electoral count, a gentleman made some remark that clashed with the judge's notions. He had advanced some heterodox views about the fundamental principles of English liberty. The implacable old judge heard him patiently, taking mental notes the while, and when he had finished the judge threw back his head against the wall, began twirling the in-evitable silver tobacco box between his thumb and forefinger, and opened on his victim with a reply. There were only four present, so the entertainment was not, of course, "billed" in advance nor was there any effort at oratorical display. The judge quietly unfolded his stock of information on the subject. For nearly an hour there was a flow of history and precedents and citation on this vital theme that would have charmed the illustrious men who talked at the Holland house in the golder prime of Macaulay. His memory was well nigh incredible. In making these citations from ancient and modern history he would refer to the very volume and page where they could be found. Before the judge was half through it became evident enough that some one in the small audience had overestimated his own acquaintance with constitu-tional English history. He was more than satisfied. The case was never ap-

The judge, poor man, so the doctors say, must certainly have weakened his memory by chewing tobacco. Perhaps this habit was providentially sent as a check, for, if he had not been held down by this handicap, he would have remembered so much more that nothing would have been left for the doctors and the rest of us.

The Affliction of Money.

You have observed the suicide of a broker named Kane, I believe. The only importance of Kane's life or death to me is the revival it brings up of his father-in-law. Several years ago, in Washington City, I saw a keen little man who made shoes at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and had accumulated a considerable amount of money in that business. ness. He was nominally a Democrat but his money obtained him the Republican support. While at Washington he was generally against the Democratic party on the sly. I knew him a little and studied him with moderate a little and studied him with inderste interest, and it was apparent to me that he was designing to have me write a speech for him, something which I never did for any Congressman, and my bashfulness, and the old fellow's bashfulness, as studied by an outsider, would have matched almost any courtbashfulness, as studied by an outsider, would have matched almost any court-ship in comedy. I think he never made his big speech, though he perhaps got permission to have it printed. haps got permission to have it printed. He would take his creature comforts, and yet was exceedingly particular about the purity of those nearest to him. On one occasion the old man came in from a Scotchy hind of spree, which he sometimes indulged in, and, pointing with his thumb to the next door to him, he said: "Gentlemen, now be particular; I have offspring in there." I had forgotten all about this poor old man, with his several hundred thousand dollars, until I saw the other day that his son-in-law had banished his wife from his presence, and then out his throat with a carving-knife; so it occurred to me that nothing had saved myself and my friends except our failure to make the same amount of money. To a fool money is a great affliction. The fool is sure to do something wrong with money. He will either go and gamble or go and make another family, or break somebody's family, or keep a fast horse and break his neck. You endow a fool and you equip a fire-balloon to go where it

Use Dr. Carpenter's Calculi Resolvent and you need not tear death from B ight's Disease. Sold by J. J. Brown.

Notwithstanding much has been said about the importance of a blood-purifying medicine, it may be possible that the matter has never seriously claimed your attention. Think of it now! If, by the use of a lew bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla you avoid the evils of acrofula, and transmit a healthy constitution to your offspring, thank us for the suggestion.

the crowded city, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the best for purgative purposes, everywhere alike convenient, efficacious, and safe. For sluggish bowels, torpid liver, indigestion, bad breath, flatulency, and sick headache, they are sure remedy.
